Jason brings more than 15 years of diverse consulting experience to Cratos' clients and is based out of Scottsdale, AZ. He has extensive experience advising underperforming/distressed companies held by individuals or private equity groups and his broad base of experience covers companies operating in the retail, manufacturing, distribution and construction sectors among others. Jason has worked extensively with C-Suites and boards while acting as an interim Deputy Restructuring Officer, Executive Vice President, Board Member or Corporate Advisor. He is adept at developing detailed and comprehensive business analysis and implementing financial, operational and strategic solutions. In addition, he has been involved with or managed engagements dealing with the refinancing of client's short and long-term debt, reducing working capital requirements, improving cost structures, enhancing margins and developing sourcing strategies. In addition to working with privately held companies, Jason has also worked with traditional and non-traditional lending institutions.

Prior to joining Cratos Jason worked for Aurora Management Partners for seven years restructuring underperforming/distressed companies and providing other advisory services. Before joining Aurora he had his own consulting firm providing strategic business, financial, and tax planning services to companies in a variety of industries. He has also worked for Manheim, a division of Cox Enterprises, which is the world's largest auto auction company where he was the corporate liaison for all international auctions and their North American non-auction businesses such as Dent Wizard and Manheim Automotive Financial Services. Prior to that he worked for both PricewaterhouseCoopers, LLP and Ernst & Young, LLP where he handled a variety of consulting projects for clients such as International Paper, Blockbuster, Vanguard and Halliburton.

Jason is a registered CPA in the state of Texas and is a member of the Arizona Turnaround Management Association. He holds a Masters of Professional Accountancy degree from The University of Texas at Austin and a B.S. from Clemson University.
